Your Future Maker type

WHO YOU ARE

Ten ideas before breakfast and the energy to match. She just needs one push to actually start, because the ideas were never the problem, finishing one of them is.

YOUR PAIN POINTS

- Energy goes in ten directions and very little gets finished, which quietly wears down her own confidence.
- Gets read by others as flaky or scattered, when really she's just overflowing with more than one outlet can hold.
- Feels overwhelmed by her own ideas rather than excited by them, once there are too many at once.
- Chases the next shiny idea the moment the current one gets hard, and never notices the pattern.

TIPS AND TRICKS FOR YOU

- Pick one idea and give it a real, slightly boring deadline before you let yourself think about the next one.
- Write new ideas down to park them, don't chase them the second they arrive. They'll still be there later.
- Find a fear buddy whose job is to hold you to finishing, not to starting. You don't need help starting.
- Aim for the first ugly version of the thing, not the polished one. Finished and rough beats perfect and unstarted.
