

The Sage

Your Future Maker type

WHO YOU ARE

She already knows more than she gives herself credit for. People come to her for the answer because she usually already has it, whether or not she believes that herself yet.

YOUR PAIN POINTS

- Carries real self-doubt despite being right more often than she admits.
- Feels like an imposter when people seek her out, as if she's about to be caught not actually knowing.
- Hesitates to act on her own knowledge the exact same way she'd confidently tell a friend to.
- Hedges out loud, softening things she's actually sure about, so nobody notices how sure she is.

TIPS AND TRICKS FOR YOU

- Before Googling it or asking someone else, write down what you already think is true. Check it against the answer after.
- Keep a running “called it” list, every time your gut turned out to be right. Read it back when you doubt yourself.
- Take your own advice once this week. The exact advice you'd give a friend in your situation.
- Stop hedging out loud on the things you already know. Just say the sentence straight.
